Press Release: Harkness Screens

Over the last decade, places of worship of all denominations have rapidly come into the way of modern communications and have embraced the audio visual experience with varying degrees of sophistication, from a simple projector and screen used to display powerful images and the verses of hymns for greater clarity to the congregation, to semi-broadcast quality presentations.

The West Church in Bangor, County Down, Northern Ireland, is one such place. With a very lively and enthusiastic congregation, the church has seen its place in the community take on a more encompassing role than ever before. With the church's large capacity, the need to provide a clearer image to all present was met by the supply and installation of a Harkness Home-View Series Tab Tensioned Screen. This unit was specified and expertly installed by premier Harkness reseller, DAC Systems Ltd.

A Harkness Pro-View was chosen for one of the other meeting rooms, where choir practise and bible studies can be accompanied by large illustrations and text.

David Meeke of DAC Systems is quoted as saying "The choice of the excellent new Harkness units was a natural one, given our previous experience of Harkness products used in many other solutions. The result can be seen in the pictures – a clear, bright surface with perfect flatness."
